HDA Programme Focus: Homage to Günther Domenig (1934-2012)

Günther Domenig (*1934 in Klagenfurt) is considered as one of the main representatives of the so-called "Grazer Schule (Graz School)", which was able to realise numerous striking buildings, especially in the 1960-90s, and attracted worldwide attention. From 1953 to 1959 he studied architecture at the Graz University of Technology. From 1980 to 2000 he was a full professor at Graz University of Technology, where he taught housing and design at the Institute for Design and Building Typology. Ten years after Günther Domenig's death, the Haus der Architektur is dedicating numerous events to the architect's extraordinary work.

Günther Domenig lived and worked in Graz, and a large number of his iconic architectural works were created in Graz and the neighbouring province of Carinthia. Many of his buildings were created in close collaboration in various project partnerships with Eilfried Huth, Hermann Eisenköck and Gerhard Wallner.
